LRT delay

NAIT students' request for U-Pass refund rejected

NAIT Student Association members are "disappointed" in Mayor Don Iveson's rejection of their U-Pass fee relief request after the Metro Line LRT opening was delayed.

The association sent a letter to the mayor's office just over a month ago asking for reversal of the planned U-Pass price increase that had already been approved.

"NAIT students are the main stakeholders for the new LRT line and they're the ones who are going to be affected by the delay," stated president Hasib Baig.

"We think it was a very reasonable request," he added.

Baig said the letter from the mayor stated, "There's other stakeholders as well who are in the community" to whom the city would not be able to provide a refund.

"That was the main reason as to why they wouldn't give us a fee refund," said Baig, who did not want to provide media with a copy of the letter at this time.

John Brennan, the strategic advisor to the mayor, said Iveson was unavailable for comment on the issue Thursday afternoon.

The NAITSA's decision to request a refund of $140,000 was made following the city's announcement in early October that the signaling contractor was struggling to meet their deadlines due to the merging of old and new systems.

Question 1: What is going on with PATs?

Changes to Provincial Achievement Tests.
Confusion abounds as boards plan differently

JEREMY NOLAIS AND LEAH HOLOIDAY
edmonton@metronews.ca

Big-city Catholic students aren't writing them, public students in Edmonton will and their peers to the south in Calgary might.

Confused yet? You're probably not alone, as Alberta metropolitan boards have spelled out differing plans for the Grade 6 Provincial Achievement Tests.

The standardized end-of-year examinations are set to be phased out in favour of computerized tests written at the start of the year.

Representatives with both the Edmonton and Calgary Catholic school boards said they had already scrapped plans for PATs this year and would instead have their students take the new tests next September.

But plans among their public peers appear to differ. Edmonton Public Schools will be writing the PATs this year, and the Calgary Board of Education said it was still waiting on direction.

In an email, Alberta Education spokeswoman Tamara Magnan did not confirm that a pilot of the new system would be conducted this fall, but stressed that once a pilot is in place, "it will be up to school districts to determine if they want to participate."

Edmonton Catholic Schools spokeswoman Lori Nagy said her organization's plan was to run the Grade 6 SLA trial next year.

"That is our information, and if something changes, then of course we would change our schedule as well," she said.

While ECS will ditch the PAT, Edmonton's public board said students in Grade 6 would be writing the exam because it's useful for data mining.

Jennifer Allen, director of research and innovation, said school districts were given the option to write the Grade 6 PATs since there will be an opportunity to run a pilot project with SLAs in the fall.

"Some districts will chose to do both, and some will chose to do one or the other," she said. "We like to have data; any data we have is good. It shows us how our kids are learning."

Reducing suicide. New bill aimed at helping gay youth

A bill to allow gay-straight alliances in schools, introduced Thursday in the Alberta legislature, will be the litmus test for Premier Jim Prentice's Tories on tolerance, says Liberal Leader Raj Sherman.

"It will test their progressiveness and test to see if they will do the right thing," Sherman told reporters.

"Stand up for teachers and stand up for our children, especially those children from the LGBTQ community."

Liberal Laurie Blakeman introduced Bill 202, the Safe and Inclusive School Act, mandating schools to allow students, if they wish, to create gay-straight alliances to combat bullying.

In Edmonton, the public school district has 25 GSA groups already up and running, while the Catholic district said it has 89 clubs that promote positive behavior and social justice.

Blakeman told the legislature the bill is about protecting students who feel bullied and, in extreme cases, try to take their own lives.

Private member's bill

- Blakeman's bill is not sponsored by the government. It is a private member's bill. Such bills traditionally do not pass.
- But Blakeman's bill is expected to reopen a polarizing debate on how Alberta's political parties view gay youth.

"As we well know, bullying can have terrible effects. And the proof is (that) the highest suicide rate is sexual minority youth," said Blakeman.

Gay-straight alliances are student-led peer support networks in schools that make students of different sexual orientations feel welcome and give them support from being alienated and bullied.

"Gay-straight peer support groups have been proven to reduce suicide in our gay youth," said Blakeman.

$900K. Money set aside for three distinct projects around arena

RYAN TUMILTY
ryan.tumilty@metronews.ca

The Edmonton Arts Council is looking to spend as much as $900,000 on three public art projects around the new downtown arena.

The arts council put out an open call for the three projects: a $500,000 sculpture north of the building near the MacEwan LRT station, a $300,000 sculpture also on the north side, but closer to the community rink, and a $100,000 project inside the building at the entrance to the community rink.

The $500,000 call is open to artists from around the world, the $300,000 call to Canadian artists and the $100,000 call only to artists from the capital region.

Katherine Kerr, the council's public art director, said she believes the sculptures will be a tremendous opportunity for any artist.

"We're really looking forward to what the artists can bring within the limitations of both of those sites," she said.

The projects are funded through the city's policy allocating one per cent of the city's contribution to any project for public art.

Coun. Scott McKeen said it makes sense to have an independent panel pick the projects.

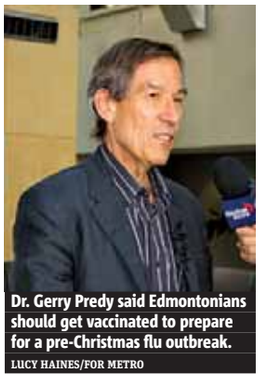

"The politicians have set the policy and now. the less the politicians are involved in the adjudication. the better," he said.

McKeen did have some suggestions however.

"Please God, no big hockey puck," he said. "If it's a giant statue of Don Cherry my head will explode."

Immunization. Health authority warns those who put it off are at risk as Edmonton heads toward peak flu season

LUCY HAINES
edmonton@metronews.ca

As Edmonton heads toward the peak of this year's flu season — expected in the third week of December — Alberta Health Services (AHS) is encouraging Albertans who haven't yet been immunized to do so right away.

Dr. Gerry Predy, AHS senior medical officer of health, said as the vaccine takes two weeks to become fully effective, now is the time to get the shot — or nasal spray — for adults and children.

"Unlike the wait you'll face to get your winter tires put on your car, you can be immunized right away — we have enough vaccine this year," said Predy. "Those who put it off are at risk for the disease, and we're starting to see an outbreak in the Edmonton area."

November has already seen outbreaks in two long-term care facilities and one city school, but Predy said the higher activity in the Edmonton region will likely change as the flu season progresses.

This year's vaccine offers protection against both the H1N1 strain, which caused a run on immunizations last winter — and the H3N2 strain, predicted to cause the most flu cases this year.

Flu facts

Some 925,000 Albertans have been immunized against the flu this season, compared to 1.2 million last winter.

- 219 cases have been reported in Alberta this fall, resulting in 69 hospitalizations and seven deaths.

Misericordia. Leak forces closure of parts of hospital

A broken pipe forced Misericordia Hospital officials to close off parts of the hospital Thursday, after water leaked from the second floor of the facility into the basement.

Metro first reported a leaking hot water pipe on the second floor had caused administrators to close the basement cafeteria.

It was unclear how the leak started, but staff confirmed the leak originated in two west — an area in the hospital that's currently under construction following a flood in 2013.

"No patients have had to be moved because of the leak," said Covenant Health spokeswoman Rayne Kuntz. "The biggest impact has been on the cafeteria."

Areas on the main floor have been cordoned off because of the water, which could affect traffic and patient flow, said Kuntz.

While the extent of the water damage is unclear, hospital officials are looking into the impact that the leak has had on the Institute for Reconstructive Sciences in Medicine, which is located on the main floor.

"It's not massive amounts of water," said Kuntz. "It's not a massive gush."

This past summer, the hospital's day ward was closed down after a pipe burst, which caused rainwater to flood parts of the first floor. LEAH HOLOIDAY/METRO

AHS postpones surgeries due to strange residue

Alberta Health Services says it has postponed almost five dozen surgeries at the Chinook Regional Hospital in Lethbridge after a dark residue was found on some instruments.

The fine residue appeared after the equipment was cleaned and sterilized.

AHS says instruments will be sent to other facilities to be cleaned until the problem is resolved.

Health officials say the residue presents a low risk to patient safety, and emergency surgeries and some elective procedures will continue using other equipment. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Quality childcare in the province, particularly for low-income families, is at a premium, says a new report.

The report released by Public Interest Alberta surveyed childcare operators in the province to identify some of the biggest concerns facing families with young children, infants and kids with special needs.

According to the data, 63 per cent of Alberta childcare operators have a waiting list, while 62 per cent of operators don't provide care for children with complex special needs.

The study also found 74 per cent of operators said low-income families pay more than $200 per month per child. METRO

More than 1,000 photos from Edmontonians supporting proper bike lane infrastructure were unveiled as part of the Edmonton Bike Coalition's photo mosaic at city hall Thursday.

Several speakers were on hand showing their support for funding proper bike lanes in the city, including Councillors Scott McKeen and Andrew Knack.

"We're going to fight like hell to make sure 102 Avenue is soon a bike lane," said McKeen.

Author Todd Babiak was also on hand, stating the several ways proper bike infrastructure would help Edmonton, noting tourism and making it a more attractive city as well.

"We're not a car city, we're a city city," he said.

A four-minute video highlights the coalition's goal of asking city council to dedicate $7 million over the next four years to build bike routes.

This mosaic and the turnout "stands as a symbol of that support and unity," say coalition members.

Funding bike lanes

- The coalition's requested dollar amount is 0.65 per cent of the 2015-2018 Capital Budget.
- The coalition launched in August in an effort to convince city council to fund bike lanes.

Kwong cheers on both teams

Veteran. He played longer with the Eskimos, but Calgary is his hometown

The Eskimos' most regal alumnus will be cheering only for a good outcome when the team he played for takes on his hometown team on Sunday.

"That's a tricky one. I have close ties, and wish the best for both teams and both cities. I wouldn't take sides — have to stay neutral," said decorated Hall-of-Famer (and Alberta's former Lt. Gov. Norman Kwong.

Long retired from sports and public life, 85-year-old Kwong said he now spends his time with his wife and 10 grandchildren, watching a bit of football on TV when he can.

"I'll probably watch Sunday's game from home, too," he said.

Okay, but while watching that game, which team jersey might he be wearing?

"Years ago, the Eskimos gave me a sweater that is half Edmonton and half Calgary — I'll have to put that on," Kwong said. "I played longer with the Eskimos, but Calgary is my hometown. Whoever wins, I can say for certain that I'll be cheering for the West at the Grey Cup." LUCY HAINES/FOR METRO

Fringe Fest. Attracts new performers each year

More performers are interested in getting in on the action at Edmonton International Fringe Theatre Festival.

The deadline for performers to apply for the 2015 Fringe was Tuesday. More than 400 applicants sent in pitches for the indoor, outdoor and Theatre for Young Audience (TYA) categories, something festival organizers say has remained steady.

"You have a one-in-four shot of getting into the festival or onto the waiting list," said Murray Utas, artistic director of the festival, which, when busking spots are also included, gets a total of about 600 applications from around the world and in Canada.

Ranked the largest fringe festival in North America, the local event sees the greatest number of applicants from within Canada — but a lot of American performers also show interest.

"One thing that is incredible is you always see the applicants that are fringe-savvy and are planning to carve their summer living by visiting fringe festivals. But every year, we always see new applicants in all categories, and it's very fascinating, and we like it," said Utas.

Children in care after parents charged

Two young children whose parents have been charged with running a cocaine conversion lab in central Alberta are in the care of family services.

RCMP say they seized thousands of dollars worth of drugs during the search of a home in Red Deer on Nov. 4.

Police say the kitchen in the house was being used to convert cocaine to crack.

The children were in the house at the time of the search and police say they appeared to be healthy. Their parents are facing several drug- and firearms-related charges. They are not being named so as to protect the identity of the children.

Police say crack, cocaine, marijuana and drug-related paraphernalia were seized along with $40,000 in cash. A hunting rifle was also taken from the home.

Canada Post. More areas switching mail service

Areas in south Edmonton will become the next areas to lose door-to-door mail service, Canada Post announced on Thursday. The corporation announced that 30,000 addresses with postal codes T6J, T6K, T6L and T6N will be converted to community mailboxes in the fall of next year.

In an emailed statement, Phil Legault of Canada Post said residents would soon receive a package of information about the changeover.

"This is a process we are currently using with our 2014 conversion process and it has provided very useful insights and facilitated our planning," he said.

Canada Post said they will not be making any layoffs to staff as part of the change, but will instead reduce staff gradually through attrition. METRO

The first two areas in the region to lose door-to-door service were St. Albert and Sherwood Park. Canada Post intends to transition all single homes with door-to-door service to community mailboxes within the next five years.

WHAT CAN WE LEARN FROM THE UNBUILT EDMONTON?

FOOTNOTES
Omar Mouallem
omouallem@gmail.com

As a child, Russell Cobb's family would take him to the Eighth Wonder of the World. It wasn't the Great Wall of China or Taj Mahal, but rather the planet's first domed multipurpose stadium: the Astrodome.

Growing up in Houston's nouveau-riche/blue-collar stew, the Cobbs, along with millions of American travellers, would pay admission not for any event but simply to be inside it — to bask in its air-conditioning and gaze upon its mammoth TV screen.

Decades later, the writer and University of Alberta professor, leading a digital humanities project on local studies, discovered 1970s blueprints for an Astrodome-inspired project in downtown Edmonton. Named the Omniplex, it was like a three-layer cake of convention centre, hockey rink and football stadium, with an icing trimming of retail, restaurants and theatres — all indoors. And, like the Astrodome, it would tame the elements of our harsh climate.

"City boosters said it was going to be the thing that put Edmonton on the map," says Cobb, who is organizing a "Retrofutures" panel discussion on how the ill-fated structure relates to Edmonton's past and present this Friday at 7 p.m. at the Stanley Milner Library.

He was struck not just by how closely it mirrored his hometown (oil-rich Houston, after all, is dismissed as backwoods and harbours an inferiority complex relative to glitzy Dallas) but by how much it mirrored present Edmonton. "Reading some of the op-eds, if you just substitute arena for Omniplex, it's the same thing," he says.

He's intrigued by how "the unbuilt" formed Edmonton's current reality, but also by how memories of these lost structures slip away from modern discourse. "It seemed to be history repeating itself."

It's a curious feeling to hear an American-born man with a raspy, southern drawl speak so intimately about local history. But Cobb is no different than many Edmontonians in this city of migrants. The constant flux of boom-time newcomers (like me) has created a cultural amnesia, where we cycle through similar ideas without applying lessons of the past.

Like the arena, the Omniplex was proposed by a mix of sports team owners, politicians and boosters, and was supposed to rejuvenate downtown. Debate over the plan dragged on until property tax-paying Edmontonians axed it in a 1971 plebiscite.

However, there are some key differences. "In all these sketches," he says, "very rarely do you see actual people. You see lots of cars, and all these towers and skyscrapers, but no one is walking. They just wanted people to come here, depositing their money in the grand piggybank that is Omniplex, and dispersing."

The proposed Edmonton Arena District adds residences to its plan, so in that respect, whether intentional or not, it's a more sustainable plan.

But Cobb wonders whether the emphasis on luxury developments is building another kind of exclusiveness.

"It seem like it's for extremely wealthy people," he says about the future of downtown Edmonton. Is it at odds with the rhetoric of building organic, healthy and sustainable neighbourhoods?

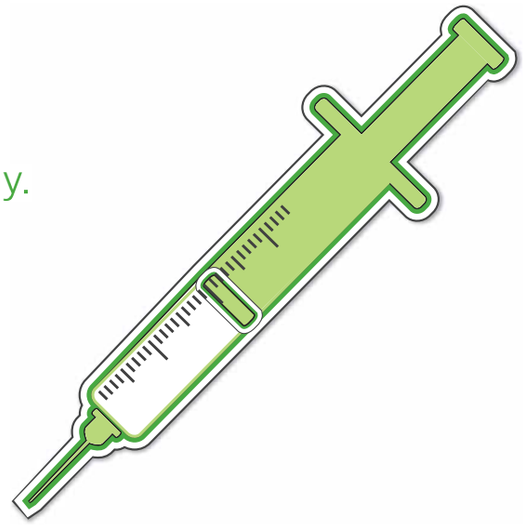

"This is the troubling side of new urbanism."

As for what would have become of the Omniplex, Cobb thinks it most likely would have met the fate of the Astrodome — a stagnant stadium abandoned by its NFL team (curiously called the Oilers for a time) and baseball players for humbler arenas. It was almost demolished last year.

"I think had Edmonton built the Omniplex, we'd be talking about bulldozing it now."

Oscar nomination shortlist for NAIT instructor's documentary

Unclaimed. Locally made by Michael Jorgensen who says Edmonton/Alberta film industry is on the cusp of greatness

STEPHANIE DUBOIS
stephanie.dubois@metronews.ca

A golden statue could sit on one NAIT instructor's desk if an early Oscar nomination turns into a win.

Local filmmaker Michael Jorgensen says it's a complete honour to make it onto the list for his documentary Unclaimed, but an even bigger win for the local film industry.

"I always set out to tell great stories and I think it's recognition of that," he said.

"With digital production, there's a craving for great screen content and we're just on the tip of that wave and hopefully, Alberta and Edmonton will be one of those centres."

Positive reaction

- The film was loved by audiences around the world, selling out shows and receiving standing ovations at the Hot Docs International Documentary Festival in Toronto last year
- The documentary is one of 134 nominated films vying for the coveted golden statue in the best feature documentary category.

Unclaimed, created by a NAIT instructor Michael Jorgensen, is on the shortlist for an Oscar nomination. CONTRIBUTED

The final scene was filmed in Edmonton, with other parts of the movie shot in the U.S. and Vietnam.

Unclaimed tells the story of Tom Faunce, who endures through a traumatic childhood and two years in the U.S. Army during the Vietnam War, but makes an oath to spend his life helping those in need.

His journey takes a turn when he discovers an American Special Forces soldier listed as dead is in fact alive in Southeast Asia, something Faunce struggles to prove throughout the film.

"It just shows that it doesn't matter where you come from, a great story can come from anywhere," said Jorgensen.

Studio's potential closure prompts industry chatter

Although Film Alberta Studio officials won't confirm, filmmakers say the large studio won't remain a film studio for much longer. SCREENSHOT

Local filmmakers are coming together to think of ways to boost the city's film industry after learning the Film Alberta Studio will no longer service filmmakers.

The 15,000 square foot soundstage is equipped with 13 production offices, an underground tank and a film dark room, as well as other features, and is the largest of its kind in the city.

Representatives of the studio said there's "nothing official" at this time but wouldn't provide further comments to Metro.

Lindsey McNeill, who works in the building the studio is based in, first posted on her blog about the studio's future and says it's "public knowledge if you come in here and can see what is happening here."

Although the impact might not hurt the local film industry substantially, it provides a set of challenges when recruiting larger-scale productions.

Studio credits

- Freezer, starring Dylan McDermott, was filmed at the studio.
- Carpentry, hair and makeup rooms and a green room are also in the studio

"The loss has already happened," McNeill said.

"I think this is just a symptom of what has been happening in Edmonton for a long time and I think it's a perfect rallying point for filmmakers to stop being apathetic and start getting engaged in their communities."

Alberta Media Production Industries Association (AMPIA) officials say those discussions have already begun, thanks to the change of the studio.

City bumping up security at rec centres

City-run. 'More and more times our staff are raising the flags ... in terms of them feeling safe,' says facilities manager

LEAH HOLOIDAY
leah.holoiday@metronews.ca

Edmonton facilities

- Edmonton has 63 city-run recreation facilities, which include multi-purpose facilities and arenas.
- The city's latest recreation centre, Meadows Community Recreation Centre, is scheduled to open Nov. 27.

The city administration has budgeted for increased security measures in the 2015 Operating Budget. PHOTO COURTESY OF CITY OF EDMONTON

Edmonton rec-centre users can expect to see more security at their favorite facility, as the city plans to step up surveillance across the board.

City administration has allotted $474,000 in the proposed operating budget to implement new security measures at facilities throughout Edmonton.

The cash will be used to beef up supervision in locker rooms, along with contracting out security guards and peace officers to patrol facilities at peak hours.

Facilities manager Rob Smyth said the city has seen a population bump and more people hit up recreation facilities, which means a bump in incidents.

As of now, staff members are dealing with most security complaints for difficult users, he added.

"Anecdotally, more and more times our staff are raising the flags a little bit, just in terms of them feeling safe and secure in the city facilities," Smyth said.

While the increase has been gradual, Smyth said the city's goal is to make sure every facility is safe and welcoming to all users.

"It's about us doing our due diligence around making sure these places are safe and people feel comfortable in them," Smyth said.

If approved by council, the funding will also go towards programming, like the "bait locker" initiative, where alarms were installed in certain lockers to sound off when broken into.

Renewal program baffles city auditor

Infrastructure.
Report laments lack of documentation on why some neighbourhoods are chosen for work and others aren't

Wondering why your neighbourhood, with cracked sidewalks and rutted streets, hasn't seen a city renewal project? So is the city's auditor.

In a report on the city's roads department, the auditor found while there are broad guidelines about which neighbourhoods are repaired, there are also internal decisions made by staff.

"We found that management has not documented these criteria or the importance of considering them when deciding which projects to complete," wrote David Wiun.

Wiun found while there are guidelines, there are a lot of personal decisions being made.

"The selection of projects ultimately rests with a limited number of city employees," he said.

Barry Belcourt, branch manger for roads design and construction, defended the program and said he is confused by the auditor's findings.

"I don't know where they are coming from because we have it all documented," he said.

Belcourt said the city doesn't simply tackle the worst neighbourhoods, but has to put in a long list of criteria.

"It's not the worst first. It's based on our criteria," he said.

Coun. Mike Nickel said the department needs much stronger documentation.

"When you are the taxpayer and you are paying a 1.5 per cent tax increase, you got to be clear and concise in your prioritization," he said.

Nickel said it's a question of transparency to taxpayers.

"How am I supposed to say to the voter, 'Oh yes, everything is clear and transparent and on the up and up'?"

RYAN TUMILTY/METRO

The city auditor has found it's difficult to find justifications for why the transportation does renewal work in some neighbourhoods rather than others. METRO FILE

Roads. More transportation cash could go to rural areas

Transportation Minister Wayne Drysdale told a room full of rural councillors Thursday that it's time for the province to invest more in their roads.

Drysdale said big ring-road projects in the cities, as well as Highway 63, have tied up much of the province's funds and he hopes to rebalance the spending.

"Going forward, I hope we can spend lots of Transportation's capital dollars in rural Alberta, to get our roads back into shape," said Drysdale.

Several rural councillors at the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts and Counties convention pleaded with Drysdale to help them address a long list of bridges and roads that need repair work.

Drysdale said afterward the ring roads and Highway 63 were valuable, but they crowded out important founding.

"Those are very important projects, I am not going to apologize for doing that. Those were projects that needed to be done," he said.

He said that doesn't mean there won't be money to spend in cities on LRT projects or other transportation priorities.

"It's not one or the other," he said. "We can continue both."

Coun. Scott McKeen said he doesn't believe any shift has to be a bad thing for Edmonton.

"We would always expect for them to do this equitably and to be able to justify their investment," he said. "I don't want to play into any kind of rural-urban rift."

RYAN TUMILTY/METRO

Projects

Drysdale said the province has committed funds to all the upgrades for Highway 63, as well as Edmonton's ring road, and it has only one piece of Calgary's left to fund.

Strathmore.
Council gives Chuckles the pig OK to stick around

Members of a Strathmore family are squealing with delight after a town council vote late Wednesday allowed them to keep possession of their prized porker.

The Dahl family claims Chuckles, a Vietnamese pot-bellied pig, helps their 11-year-old daughter Cassandra stave off night terrors, but, by keeping the pig in their pen, they were violating the town's livestock bylaw.

Cassandra Dahl and her pot-bellied pig Chuckles have been reunited. METRO FILE

But councillors voted late Wednesday to allow exceptions for animals registered with a Canadian authority that identifies them as an "emotional support animal."

The Dahls have registered Chuckles with the National Service Animal Registry.

After Wednesday's vote, father Trevor said his daughter was overjoyed to sleep next to Chuckles for the first time in months.

"This was probably, for her 11 years of age, the most important event that's ever happened in her life," he said.

Town Mayor Mike Ell conceded the Chuckles debate was among the more odd ones he's been involved with as a municipal politician.

"Interesting experiences in life do happen and it makes the world go around," he said.

Alcohol believed to be factor in one of two fatal collisions

Two people have been killed in separate highway crashes in central Alberta.

RCMP say the first collision happened early Wednesday evening when a southbound car on Highway 2A in the Wetaskiwin region was hit from behind and pushed into the path of a northbound truck.

A 56-year-old woman who was driving one of the vehicles died at the scene.

The second crash happened about two and a half hours later when two vehicles collided on Highway 21 near Swalwell, killing a 21-year-old man who was a former resident of Beiseker, Alta.

Police say the victim, who was driving a pickup truck, collided with another pickup that had failed to stop before coming off a side road.

Alcohol is believed to have been a factor in that crash.

Private fine arts/digital technology college changes name and adds new diploma programs

In Edmonton's already growing tech start-up industry, the next generation of so-called "smart creatives" have further reason to stay — two new diploma programs that will funnel talent into the thriving field, and a new school name and logo to mark the transition.

Quoted

"Edmonton isn't a dirty word any more. It's phenomenal to put the city's name on every graduate's diploma from EDAC — it's another expression of the growing confidence in this city."

Mayor Don Iveson, at the renaming announcement of Edmonton Digital Arts College

The former Guru Digital Arts College is now Edmonton Digital Arts College (EDAC), with plans to add diploma programs in Digital Cinema and Front End Developer to it's current offerings in Digital Illustration, Digital Media Production, Video Game Design and 3D Animation Production.

"To see EDAC grow and thrive — to be embedded at Startup Edmonton — benefits a whole ecosystem of communities; both creative arts and business," said Edmonton Mayor Don Iveson.

Startup Edmonton CEO Ken Bautista said he's excited to work with a new line of programming to keep boosting the city's competitive advantage in the tech field.

"Do we have the talent pool for areas that we don't even know about yet?" he said.

"Tech companies are growing in Edmonton, so we need the smart creatives who know how to build, tinker and create."

Police eyeing new space downtown

Rod Knecht. Chief says it would be great to have recruiting facility at ground level of new building

RYAN TUMILTY
ryan.tumilty@metronews.ca

When city staff move into a new downtown office building, parts of Edmonton's police force could be coming with them.

Police chief Rod Knecht said the service has submitted a business case to have some of EPS' administrative staff move out of the downtown headquarters and into the new tower.

"We'd like three or four floors," he told media on Wednesday.

Knecht said it would be great to have a recruiting facility at the ground level of the new building as more and more people head to downtown Edmonton.

"We see that as an opportunity," he said.

The proposed 27-storey tower is already under construction at the corner of 104 Avenue and 101 Street. The city is set to take floors two through 19 of the new building, with private tenants taking up the rest of the space.

City staff are currently spread across nine office buildings in the downtown core and the new tower is designed to allow for consolidation of those staff.

David Holehouse, a spokesman for the city, said in an email that it would be too soon to know if the police could be accommodated in the new space.

"We're in the process of looking into all the options and opportunities for occupancy of the new office building," he said.

Mayor Don Iveson said the idea is worth considering, especially given that many of the police services' administration functions work so closely with city staff.

"If there (are) efficiencies to be gained by that, I think that is absolutely worth pursuing."

WITH FILES FROM LEAH GERMAIN/ METRO EDMONTON

Proposed tower

- The proposed office tower is expected to be open in 2016.
- The city has a 20-year lease on its space in the Katz group building, which has options for renewal built in.

Canadian veterans given French Legion of Honour

Seventeen Second World War veterans in Montreal were awarded the French Legion of Honour on Thursday, including one who will turn 100 next year.

An emotional ceremony featuring the 17 was held in the presence of Philippe Zeller, the French ambassador to Canada, and deputy veterans affairs minister Walt Natynczyk.

Zeller described the award as an expression of France's wish to honour men who helped liberate the country during the war.

The oldest of the honorees was 99-year-old John Stuart Hermon, whose accomplishments include running the Boston Marathon at the age of 78.

For Hermon, the ceremony was a very touching experience.

"It makes one think how precious families and relatives are," the former captain in the 7th Field Regiment, Royal Canadian Artillery, said in an interview.

Allan Bolduc, 91, after receiving the Legion of Honour. THE CANADIAN PRESS

"We should all be very grateful for the efforts that have been made by all of the veterans who are not here and that their families will eventually appreciate just what sacrifices their relatives have made in the battle of Europe."

Hermon recalled that his job was to drop bombs on the enemy and avoid getting killed.

"In the moment of battle, your mind is concentrated on doing a job, the same as it is in civilian life," he said. "There's no free pass and there's no turning back."

The 17 live at the Ste. Anne's Hospital for veterans in Sainte-Anne-de-Bellevue on the Island of Montreal. They are among some 600 Canadian veterans receiving the award this year. The Legion of Honour was created by Napoleon in 1802. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Supreme Court to rule on Métis, non-status

Landmark case.

The court's eventual decision could vastly extend government jurisdiction to more Aboriginal Peoples

The question of whether the federal government has the same responsibility to the country's Métis and non-status Indians as it does to status Indians and Inuit has fallen to the Supreme Court of Canada.

The outcome of the case could vastly extend the federal government's jurisdiction to hundreds of thousands of Aboriginal Peoples.

Or it could overturn a historic victory.

On Thursday, the Supreme Court agreed to hear appeals from both sides in a case started 15 years ago by Métis leader Harry Daniels. As usual, the court did not give reasons for its decision to hear the case.

Legal battle continues

The Supreme Court also gave the Métis National Council, which is a intervenor to the case, more time to file its own response to the appeals.

- The council wanted the federal government to drop its appeal and start working out an agreement with the Métis people.

The Congress of Aboriginal Peoples, along with several Métis and non-status Indians, took the federal government to court in 1999, alleging discrimination because they were not considered "Indians" under a section of the Constitution Act and thus have been denied rights. Both the Métis and non-status Indians scored a major win last year when the Federal Court recognized them as "Indians" under a section of the Constitution. The federal government appealed that ruling.

Earlier this year, the Federal Court of Appeal upheld part of the decision.

"This is an important step in the long struggle begun by my predecessor as national chief of the Congress of Aboriginal Peoples, Harry Daniels," National Chief Betty Ann Lavallee said in a statement.

"The decision of the Court of Appeal was flawed in our view, as it drew an unhelpful distinction between the federal government's responsibility for non-status Indians and its responsibilities toward Métis peoples and status Indians." The Métis National Council wanted the feds to drop their appeal and work out an agreement with the Métis.

Senators prepare push for inquiry

Missing, murdered aboriginal women. Liberal senators have ready-made legal arguments to force national examination

Former Liberals in the Senate are offering up ready-made legal arguments to anyone willing to take the federal government to court in order to force a national inquiry into missing and murdered aboriginal women and girls.

They say they are taking the legal route because Prime Minister Stephen Harper's Conservative government refuses to heed the calls of aboriginal groups, civil-liberty organizations and opposition parties to hold an inquiry.

"I think that there is no other choice than to go to court," said Sen. Serge Joyal, who wrote the legal argument.

"This is a way to press upon the government in a more efficient manner, so the government will have to defend its stance in court and be shamed by public opinion. That, I think, might compel the government to act, finally."

Joyal, a lawyer by training, cites sections of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, other legal cases and the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples to buttress his argument for an inquiry.

But they say a court case will put pressure on the Conservative government to call an inquiry, something it has refused despite pledging a five-year $25 million renewal of funds aimed to fight violence against aboriginal women. THE CANADIAN PRESS

G20 police hearing. 'I've never seen this much riot gear': Paikin

A veteran journalist who witnessed the mass arrests during the G20 summit four years ago told a police disciplinary hearing Thursday that in his 32-year career he had never seen Toronto officers "kettle" peaceful protesters.

Steve Paikin, who hosts TVO's The Agenda, testified in a hearing for Supt. David (Mark) Fenton, the most senior police officer charged in the mass arrests during the meeting of global leaders.

Paikin told the judge that before the night of June 26, 2010, he had never seen police in riot gear box in protesters who didn't appear to threaten public safety.

"I've never seen this much riot gear, never seen the kind of hemming in that officers did this time," he said.

In the past, he said, police only intervened when protesters became "overly aggressive."

"Those were not the conditions on the night in question," he said, noting the crowd was sitting and chanting the words peaceful protest.

Fenton ordered officers to box in the protesters. More than 260 people were arrested and taken to a prisoner processing centre, which was criticized for its deplorable conditions.

He has pleaded not guilty to a total of five charges of unlawful arrest and discreditable conduct arising out of two "kettling" incidents.

Obama's immigration plam aims to spare five million from deportation

Battle heats up.
President spurns Republicans with expansive changes to immigration in the U.S.

President Barack Obama is ordering far-reaching changes to the U.S. immigration system that will protect nearly 5 million people from deportation, testing the limits of his presidential powers and inviting a showdown with newly emboldened Republicans.

In a televised address Thursday night, Obama described the most sweeping changes to fractured immigration laws in nearly three decades, saying his executive actions were a "commonsense" plan consistent with what previous presidents of both parties had done. Immigrants living illegally in the United States would be saved from deportation by receiving work permits; millions more would remain in limbo.

Obama sought to break a stalemate in America's long-simmering debate over immigration by cutting out Congress, confronting Republicans who swept congressional elections earlier this month and ensuring that the contentious debate will carry on into the 2016 presidential campaign.

"To those members of Congress who question my authority to make our immigration system work better, or question the wisdom of me acting where Congress has failed, I have one answer: Pass a bill," Obama said.

Republicans, who take full control of Congress in January after capturing the Senate from Democrats, warned that Obama would face serious consequences for what they described as an unconstitutional power grab.

"The president will come to regret the chapter history writes if he does move forward," declared Sen. Mitch McConnell, the Republican who is soon to become the Senate majority leader, hours before Obama's speech.

Republicans were united in opposing his move but divided on how to respond. Lawmakers have raised options including lawsuits, a government shutdown and even impeachment. Party leaders are seeking to avoid a government shutdown, say such moves could backfire and anger voters ahead of the next presidential election in two years.

The White House says the president is exercising his executive authority to tackle immigration reform unilaterally, as Republicans Ronald Reagan and George H.W. Bush did before him.

Obesity health costs $2 trillion annually worldwide

The global cost of obesity has risen to $2 trillion US annually — nearly as much as smoking or the combined impact of armed violence, war and terrorism, according to a new report released Thursday.

The McKinsey Global Institute consulting firm's report focused on the economics of obesity, putting it among the top three social programs generated by human beings. It puts its impact at 2.8 per cent of global gross domestic product.

"Obesity isn't just a health issue," one of the report's authors, Richard Dobbs, said in a podcast. "But it's a major economic and business challenge."

The company says 2.1 billion people — about 30 per cent of the global population — are overweight or obese and that about 15 per cent of health care costs in developed economies are driven by it.

In emerging markets, as countries get richer, the rate of obesity rises to the same level as that found in more developed countries. The report offers the stark prediction that nearly half the world's adult population will be overweight or obese by 2030 should present trends continue.

"We are on an unfortunate trajectory," Dobbs told The Associated Press. "We have to act."

The report's authors argue that efforts to deal with obesity have been piecemeal until now, and that a systemic response is needed.

McKinsey says there's no single or simple solution to the problem, but global disagreement on how to move forward is hurting progress. The analysis is meant to offer a starting point on the elements of a possible strategy.

Florida State shooter believed government after him: Police

Conspiracy theories. Police have obtained a journal and videos of Myron May that detail his thoughts of being targeted for persecution

A Tallahassee police officer talks to several students outside the Strozier library on the Florida State University campus where a shooting occurred Thursday. The gunman was shot and killed by police officers. MARK WALLHEISER/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A Florida State University alumnus and attorney who shot three people at the school's library early Thursday believed the government was targeting him for persecution, detailing his thoughts in a journal and in videos detectives obtained, authorities said.

Officers fatally shot 31-year-old Myron May during an exchange outside the library at about 12:30 a.m.

May reloaded at least once and tried to enter the library, where 300 or more students were studying but was blocked by lobby security barriers that permit only students and staff inside, Tallahassee Police Chief Michael DeLeo said.

The shooting sent students scrambling for cover in the book aisles and barricading themselves in with desks amid screams from classmates.

One person is in critical condition and one is in good condition at a local hospital, while the third was released.

May's Facebook page shows he posted mostly Bible verses and links to conspiracy theories about the government reading people's minds.

According to a Las Cruces, New Mexico, police report last month, May was a subject of a harassment complaint after a former girlfriend called to report he came to her home uninvited and claimed police were bugging his house and car.

The report also said May recently quit his job and was on medication.

No charges were filed.

Abigail Taunton, who runs a foster home, told the Associated Press that May was staying at a guest house she owns. She said she had known him since he was about 14 and that he ran cross country with her kids and stayed at her house a lot.

She said he lived with his grandmother after coming out of a "bad situation" with his parents.

"My heart's broken. In a million years I wouldn't have thought he'd do something like this." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Swedish appeals court

Detention order for Assange remains

A Swedish appeals court upheld the detention order on Julian Assange on Thursday, dismissing a challenge by the WikiLeaks founder who is wanted by prosecutors in an investigation of alleged sex crimes.

Confirming a ruling by a lower court, the Svea appeals court said there is no reason to lift the detention order just because it can't be enforced at the moment.

Assange has avoided being extradited to Sweden by taking shelter in the Ecuadorean Embassy in London since 2012.

The court also criticized the prosecutors, who have declined Assange's offer to be questioned in London, for not considering "alternative avenues" to move the investigation forward.

Assange hasn't been formally indicted in Sweden, but is wanted for questioning by police about allegations of sexual misconduct and rape involving two women in 2010.

Russian hackers easily swipe personal videos

Online security. Russian Hackers targeted baby monitors, webcams and personal security cameras and uploaded the footage to a website

Russian hackers targeted personal videos from several countries, including Canada, and then posted footage online. ISTOCK

For Russian hackers, it's as easy as 1-2-3-4.

That's among the simple manufacturer passwords that have been exploited to swipe personal video from computers in more than 100 countries, including Canada, and post the footage on a Russian website, according to Britain's information commission.

The hackers have been targeting baby monitors, webcams, and personal security cameras, uploading the footage to a site authorities have declined to identify for fear of driving traffic its way.

A child playing in Bucheon, South Korea, and an empty crib in Absecon, N.J., are among the video images that have appeared on the website, Britain's Information Commissioner's Office said Thursday.

The hackers have posted footage from bedrooms, office buildings, shops, laundromats, stables and barns, the agency said.

Canada's Privacy Commissioner could not immediately say how many Canadians have been targeted, or how they have been affected, but spokeswoman Anne-Marie Hayden said the commission was trying to get the hacked images taken off the website.

"We've been in touch with, and are now working with, our international counterparts on this issue," she said in an email.

"We fully support UK Information Commissioner Christopher Graham's call for Russian authorities to take immediate action to take down the site."

"As well, we plan to reach out to web camera makers to discuss the issue of defaults and webcams with remote access capabilities," she added.

"We would also urge anyone with a webcam in their home or business to ensure that they take steps to secure the camera — make sure you are not using the factory default password."

The hackers have preyed on IP cameras, which let users remotely monitor footage via a web address, said Greg Jones, spokesman for the U.K.'s Information Commissioner.

To stream the live video, users must enter a password, and they often use the simple default code provided by the manufacturer: Combinations such as "pass" or "1234."

To beef up their security, people should use passwords with a combination of upper- and lower-case letters, numbers, and characters like ampersands and plus signs.

"If you were to change your password from a default password, (your footage) would disappear off the site shortly afterward," Jones said.

Hong Kong

Authorities in Hong Kong were the first to be alerted to the site, he added, before passing on what they knew to their Australian counterparts, who informed Canada's Privacy Commissioner.

- "It was initially Hong Kong — Hong Kong to Australia, Australia to Canada, Canada to ourselves and then America, as well."
- British authorities think the site may be hosted by a company with ties to the U.S., and are working with officials in that country to confirm.

Pipeline protesters arrested in B.C.

Burnaby, B.C.
RCMP arrested people, enforcing a court order to clear the area

Scuffles broke out as dozens of RCMP officers, shoulder to shoulder, formed a line to push protesters away from an area near Vancouver that a B.C. Supreme Court has ordered cleared.

An officer using a loudspeaker repeatedly ordered protesters to move about 100 metres up the road in a conservation area of Burnaby Mountain away from where Kinder Morgan survey crews would be working.

One middle-aged woman who was in front of the moving line of officers was tossed to the ground behind police and was quickly arrested.

"Hey, that's violence," a protester yelled at police as the woman slammed on to the road. Other protesters yelled obscenities at officers.

What had been a peaceful protest, and a series of uneventful arrests early Thursday, became aggressive as officers ordered the crowd of over 100 chanting demonstrators to move back.

RCMP moved into the anti-pipeline encampment earlier in the day, arresting at least 14 people for violating the injunction ordering protesters to clear out so crews can do their work for the expansion of the Trans Mountain pipeline.

Police said many of those arrested were released on the condition that they no longer interfere, obstruct or impede survey crews.

RCMP Staff Sgt. Maj. John Buis said the remaining protesters were being processed at the scene and would also be released if as long as they agreed to abide by the court order. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Mozilla replaces Google with Yahoo

Yahoo will supplant Google's search engine on Firefox's Web browser in the U.S., signalling Yahoo's resolve to regain some of the ground that it has lost in the most lucrative part of the Internet's ad market.

The five-year alliance announced Wednesday will end a decade-old partnership in the U.S. between Google Inc. and the Mozilla Foundation, which oversees the Firefox browser. The tensions between Google and Mozilla had been rising since Google's introduction of the Chrome browser in 2008 began to undercut Firefox. Google's current contract with Mozilla expires at the end of this month, opening an opportunity for Yahoo to pounce.

Even though Chrome is now more widely used, Firefox still has a loyal audience that makes more than 100 billion worldwide search requests annually.

Yahoo is hoping to impress Firefox users as it sets out to prove that it's still adept at Internet search. The Sunnyvale, Calif., company leaned on Microsoft's technology for most of the results on its own website for the past four years.

Financial details of Yahoo's Firefox contract weren't disclosed. In a blog post, Mozilla CEO Chris Beard said the new deal offers "strong, improved economic terms" while allowing Mozilla "to innovate and advance our mission in ways that best serve our users and the Web."

Besides dropping Google in the U.S., Mozilla is also shifting Firefox to Baidu's search engine in China and Yandex in Russia. Firefox users still have the option to pull down a tab to pick Google and other search engines as their preferred way for looking up information online.

Yahoo Inc. CEO Marissa Mayer, a former Google executive, hailed the Firefox agreement as Yahoo's most significant partnership since forging the Microsoft deal in 2009.

MEN'S RIGHTS ≠ MISOGYNY

In a country that often shines the spotlight on women's rights, is there a place for centres — like one opened this week in Toronto — dedicated to men's issues, or do their values run counter to feminism? Metro's Rosemary Westwood argues that gender rights can't exist without men in the conversation, even if they're advocating on their own behalf.

ROSEMARY WESTWOOD
Metro in Toronto

No good will come of using men as props in the fight for gender equality.

That's why the city — and country — needs a men's centre.

The new Canadian Centre for Men and Families — which offers workshops, support groups and counselling for boys, men and fathers — has been criticized for allegedly misrepresenting itself and holding anti-feminist views. But a men's centre of some kind could provide exactly what feminists and women's advocates have been calling for: more people of both genders taking responsibility for inequality and seeking solutions.

Yes, men still have many of the hallmarks of privilege. They make more money than women. They are vastly overrepresented in politics and business. And yes, men are also in large part the perpetrators of violence (four times out of five, according to Statistics Canada).

But men are increasingly arguing that women aren't the only ones hurt by the gender divide. And they're right.

Current ideas of masculinity are toxic for both genders. The suicide rate for men is roughly three times that for women.

They face issues related to custody and divorce, as well as body image (boys as young as 10 are reportedly becoming obsessed with building muscles). Men are also about as likely as women to be the victims of violence.

And they can be victims of sexualized violence, too.

I'll even quote the infamous Warren Farrell, dubbed the father of the so-called men's rights movement, whose work is referenced by the Canadian Centre for Men and Families:

"We need to know not only why are our sons committing suicide, but also why are our sons much more likely to be the ones to shoot up schools?" he asked on NPR. "We're all in jeopardy if we don't pay attention to the cries of pain and isolation and alienation that are happening among our sons."

That's what makes groups such as WizeGuys so awesome. The sexual education group in Alberta sees men educating boys not just on their bodies, sexual health, and issues of consent, but also on how to build empathy and on "the connection between masculinity and male norms, sexuality and violence."

What if we had a national centre that housed the debate, research, policy-making and educational resources to open up that conversation?

Wouldn't that make men responsible for solutions to problems such as sexual violence — exactly what we feminists have been calling for?

Women's issues have (rightly) taken centre stage. But it's time to share the spotlight.

Fathers for Justice campaigners, dressed as Spider-Man and Batman, hold a sign saying "Stop War on Dads" on the roof of a politician's home in London, England. A new Canadian centre for men is trying to distance itself from more fringe elements in the men's rights movement. CATE GILLON/GETTY IMAGES

The other side

When the Canadian Centre for Men and Families opened in Toronto this week, it wasn't without controversy.

- Opponents worry groups like these bring together people with misogynistic beliefs who blame women and feminists for all of their problems.
- The Canadian Association for Equality (CAFE), for example, has been a magnet for controversy and a target for protest and criticism. It reached a peak in November 2012, when a talk by controversial author Warren Farrell was the scene of loud protests by about 100 people from feminist and left-wing groups.
- Critics have also accused the group of links to the website A Voice For Men, which is perceived as condoning violence. CAFE's director has denied any link.

KATE CARRAWAY
Guest column

There's no better feeling than feeling known. It really is the warmest human pleasure, to be called out or identified or teased or even criticized in some way that demonstrates another person's sense of who — how — you are, for better or worse. "They just get me," we say about a new love or a friend or some other person who, not "as if" by magic, but really by magic, seems to understand us in the way we want and maybe even need to be understood.

That's why being known the wrong way is totally, singularly devastating: Being misunderstood by someone who thinks they really got it, but in fact was just making assumptions, or demonstrating their expectations, feels so much worse than being ignored.

It's so common, and so constant, though, because deciding that someone is some way based on a few easy, obvious, quick facts requires almost no effort of imagination or emotional labour.

I've found that acquaintances in real life and online — with good intentions and bad — feel just fine asking me way-too-personal questions because I'm a writer and have shared a lot about myself, both artificially and earnestly, in newspapers and magazines; it's as if I owe them some piece of my privacy.

I write often about relationships — but never mention who or if I'm dating — which has meant that readers assume it's chill to email me aggressively flirtatious stuff, because they assume I'm into it. (No.)

It's a particular kind of rudeness, really, that we just accept from each other, and it's actually getting to be a lot of people's problem, more and more, as social media establishes and asserts itself as a half-real part of our identities.

Using an online or social-media persona as a meaningful indication of someone else's life and brain and feelings is almost unavoidable — too easy, too obvious, too fast — when there is so much stuff there to go on, and so much of it apparently personal, apparently insistent. It's defensive, maybe: Let a Facebook page do the hard, confusing work of getting to know someone, of getting close, even if it means missing the point. See? Rude.

These great, stupid expectations are, more generally, life-ruiners: Almost every problem can be attributed to an assumption or an expectation, to thinking we're owed something, we deserve something, we're right about something. Or, someone. Being mistaken for the person I am in my writing or online has shown me on a near-constant basis how much people take for granted about each other, and in general.

As culture "flattens" beyond our obvious demographics and lifestyles, and our individual differences become more nuanced and acute, it should follow that we assume and expect less of each other, accept possibility and surprise, and let people reveal themselves slowly, subtly — and get to reveal ourselves, too.

Games of prey go way back

Mockingjay, Part 1. Hunger Games' theme of humans hunting each other to entertain the rich and powerful is a well-worn premise in books and movies

Josh Hutcherson as Peeta and Jennifer Lawrence as Katniss star in Hunger Games: Mockingjay, Part 1. CONTRIBUTED

Since the release of the first Hunger Games novel in 2008, literary sleuths have picked it apart, searching for connections to other books and films.

The scrutiny increased when the first film in the tetralogy set records for the biggest opening weekend for a non-sequel in 2013, and continues unabated with the release of this weekend's The Hunger Games: Mockingjay, Part 1.

Based on Suzanne Collins's mega-successful series, the movies are set in a dystopian world ruled by a fascist-style president (Donald Sutherland) who presides over The Hunger Games, a televised battle-to-the-death between 24 young players, two from each of the country's districts, including Katniss Everdeen (Jennifer Lawrence) and Peeta Mellark (Josh Hutcherson).

The series draws on things we've seen before, in everything from the human sacrifices of Greek mythology or Survivor-style television shows to news stories of government corruption to create a world with its own rules, style and customs.

The most often-cited influence is Battle Royale, a 2000 Japanese movie based on a book by Koushun Takami. Like The Hunger Games, it's a story of school kids in a televised government-sanctioned death match.

Battle Royale's DVD box set even included a quote from a critic suggesting there'd be no Hunger Games without the Japanese film. "This is the movie that started it all," it reads.

Hunger fans were quick to point out differences in the two films.

The Japanese movie is about survival, they said, while Collins wrote about revolution. The author revealed her main influences were reality television and the Iraq war.

"I had never heard of that book or that author until my book was turned in," she told the New York Times.

It's worth noting that the idea of humans being preyed upon for the entertainment of the upper classes dates back at least as far as 1932's The Most Dangerous Game.

The story of a big-game hunter who tracks humans for sport on an isolated island is based on a Richard Connell short story that also loosely inspired episodes of everything from Gilligan's Island to Lost in Space.

Since then, Norman Jewison's Rollerball, Roger Corman's Deathrace 2000 (and its 2008 Jason Statham remake) and The Running Man have mined similar territory.

As for the author who wrote Battle Royale, he gave ABC News a very diplomatic answer when asked about the similarities between the two stories.

"I think every novel has something to offer," he said.

"If readers find value in either book, that's all an author can ask for."

The Hunger Games: Mockingjay, Part 1

Directors. Francis Lawrence

Stars. Jennifer Lawrence, Josh Hutcherson

Mockingjay, Part 1 ups the stakes considerably from the last film in the series, putting several big ideas into motion. The cinematic world created in the first two movies is about to change in very dramatic ways, and this movie prepares viewers for the revolution that will try to unify the districts against the evil President Snow (Donald Sutherland). Katniss (Jennifer Lawrence) looks suitably concerned throughout and there are several effectively staged action scenes. But despite fine performances from Lawrence, Julianne Moore and Phillip Seymour Hoffman, and lessons in mass-produced anarchy, it occasionally feels padded, like a place holder for next year's series finale.

Remembering Mike Nichols

Mike Nichols — a director of matchless versatility who brought fierce wit, caustic social commentary and wicked absurdity to film, TV and stage hits — has died at 83. Married to ABC's Diane Sawyer, he started as a standup performer in a groundbreaking comedy duo with Elaine May, and went on to a career that spanned more than 50 years, winning an Academy Award, a Grammy and multiple Tony and Emmy honours. Nichols had a remarkable gift for mixing edgy humour and dusky drama. Here are five things he will be most remembered for:

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Angels in America

The 2003 TV miniseries adapted from the stage sensation, blended rich pathos and whimsy in its portrait of people coping with AIDS and looking to the heavens for compassion they found lacking in Ronald Reagan's 1980s America. Nichols won directing Emmys for Angels in America Parts 1 and 2.

Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf

Nichols' 1966 film directing debut unforgettably captured the vicious yet sparkling and sly dialogue of Edward Albee's play, as a couple (Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor) torment each other over deep-seated guilt and resentment.

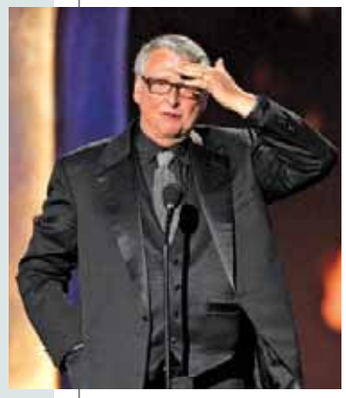

The Graduate

Nichols won the best-director Oscar for 1967's The Graduate, which co-starred Anne Bancroft as an aging temptress pursuing Dustin Hoffman, whose character responds with the celebrated line, "Mrs. Robinson, you're trying to seduce me."

Big-name collaborations

Nichols often collaborated with Jack Nicholson, Meryl Streep and Emma Thompson. Other stars who worked with Nichols included Al Pacino (Angels in America), Gene Hackman and Robin Williams (The Birdcage), Harrison Ford, Melanie Griffith and Sigourney Weaver (Working Girl) and Julia Roberts (Closer). In 2007, Nichols brought out Charlie Wilson's War, starring Tom Hanks and Julia Roberts.

His Broadway work

On Broadway, he won nine Tonys, for directing the plays Barefoot in the Park (1964), Luv and The Odd Couple (1965), Plaza Suite (1968), The Prisoner of Second Avenue (1972), The Real Thing (1984), and Arthur Miller's Death of a Salesman (2012). He has also won in other categories, for directing the musical Monty Python's Spamalot (2005), and for producing Annie (1977) and The Real Thing (1984).

Joining the Hunger Games revolution

Katniss Everdeen now has lots of help in her quest to overthrow President Snow's corrupt government

REGAN REID
scene@metronews.ca

Newcomers. As battle shifts from game to the real world, Katniss needs some help

The last time we saw Katniss Everdeen, the bow-and-arrow-wielding hero of The Hunger Games, she had just escaped the Quarter Quell (a special anniversary edition of the Games that featured victors from previous years).

After destroying the Games arena and being airlifted to safety, Katniss learns that her mentor, Haymitch Abernathy, the Head Gamemaker, Plutarch Heavensbee, and many of her closest friends and allies have all helped orchestrate a plan to take down President Snow's government.

The leaders of this rebellion want her to be the poster child for the cause. In case she needs extra convincing, she's told that Peeta is imprisoned in the Capitol and that her home, District 12, has been destroyed by firebombs.

Needless to say, in The Hunger Games: Mockingjay, Part 1, Katniss is on the warpath. When she discovers that Peeta has been brainwashed to support the Capitol's fight against the rebels, this only fuels her desire to defeat President Snow once and for all. And this time, she'll have some help.

Here's a brief introduction to some of the new characters who will join Katniss and the rebellion.

President Alma Coin (Julianne Moore)

For those a little foggy on the history of Panem, the districts waged a war against the Capitol 75 years ago and lost. As punishment, District 13 was bombed into oblivion — or so we thought. As we learn at the end of Catching Fire, District 13 still exists, but its citizens now live deep underground. President Alma Coin is not only the leader of District 13 but also of the insurrection against the Capitol. Her subterranean facility serves as the rebels' home base. As her sleek grey hair, crisp grey uniform and cold grey eyes suggest, Coin is stern. She runs her district like a military boarding school. Its citizens adhere to strict schedules, have assigned daily duties, and train for future attacks. Coin is not to be messed with — something Katniss may soon figure out for herself.

Boggs (Mahershala Ali)

Boggs is President Coin's right-hand man. Like most District 13ers, he seems cold and robotic when we first meet him — but that's probably due to the years of rigorous training, controlled diet and an altogether dull lifestyle that's enforced by Coin's administration. When Katniss joins the rebellion, Boggs is assigned to be her personal bodyguard and we quickly learn that he's not so stiff. He's actually kind, smart and very protective of Katniss, all qualities that will probably be beneficial to her when they head into battle together.

Cressida (Natalie Dormer)

A native of the Capitol, Cressida is the director of a film crew assigned to follow Katniss, a.k.a. the Mockingjay, as they film propaganda to support the rebellion. As you can tell by her punk hairdo — half her head is shaved and tattooed with vines — Cressida is not frilly or delicate like most of her Capitol compatriots. She and her team will follow Katniss into war zones without blinking an eye. She's a true professional, always looking to get the best footage for her rebel employers, but she's also a firm believer in the cause. She tells Katniss early on that she wasn't poached by Plutarch to do a job, she chose to leave the Capitol and join the fight against Snow.

Jennifer Lawrence plays Katniss Everdeen in the Hunger Games. CONTRIBUTED

A role model without ego, both on and off the screen

Jennifer Lawrence. Like her character, Hunger Games star remains humble about being in the spotlight

MATT PRIGGE
Metro World News in New York City

Jennifer Lawrence is an unusual kind of shy. She's clearly uncomfortable with praise, especially fake praise, and is the first person to make fun of herself. At the same time she's not hesitant, even enthusiastic, about sharing her self-deprecation.

It's a shtick, but a sincere shtick, if one she's gotten better at controlling.

But she can still be a loose cannon. One minute she'll be goofily oversharing about a time they shot a scene in a pretty meadow ("I got a selfie of me peeing in it!"). The next she's cryptically honest: "It's certainly a blessed life. But there are also sacrifices. I get to do what I love, but there's a downside to every job."

At a recent media event with other Hunger Games actors, Lawrence gets the most questions, even ones she's not totally comfortable fielding. She's asked about the politics of the series, especially the depiction of revolution from within the rebel bunker, led by the vaguely sinister President Coin.

"Katniss is representing the consequences of war," she says. "It's not that she doesn't believe in what President Coin wants. It's not that she doesn't believe the Capitol is a terrible government that's only good for the 1 per cent. But war is complicated. It affects everyone on both sides. There's no right way to start or end a war. I don't know."

Another cast member, Natalie Dormer, tries to summarize Lawrence's world view.

"Jen was saying that Katniss doesn't have any ego. Neither does Jennifer Lawrence," Dormer says. "Jen has a reputation as a role model. So does Katniss Everdeen. But (Lawrence) can't comment on that reputation herself, because by her very nature, she wouldn't."

Friends for real

Jennifer Lawrence says the Hunger Games cast and crew are like family, and her best friends are fellow stars Josh Hutcherson, who plays Peeta, and Liam Hemsworth, who plays Gale.

"I would never have expected to have a man this good-looking be my best friend," she says about Hemsworth. "He taught me how to be fair and to stand up for myself. My biggest weakness is negotiating with people. I'm a wimp about standing up for myself. He's really good at making sure everything stays fair. I used to let people walk all over me. He taught me to toughen up."

It was a cruel summer at the box office — but why?

Ticket sales. Record-low revenues have been blamed on fewer big films, binge-watching TV

scene@metronews.ca

Words like "disappointing" and "dismal" among others beginning with the letter "d" have been used to describe the summer's box office yield.

In movieland, the summer season is defined as the first Friday in May through Labour Day Weekend, a period that, this passed summer, saw box office revenues fall to an eight-year low, down 15 per cent from 2013, according to recently released stats.

There were some very big hits — Guardians of the Galaxy, and Transformers: Age of Extinction — but even their multi-million dollar grosses weren't enough to compete with last year's $4.75 billion overall take.

"We've seen this before," says Michael Kennedy, executive vice president, filmed entertainment at Cineplex. "Right now, everybody's binging. After a while they will get tired of binge-watching TV and say, 'I'm really tired of being in my house. I want to go out.'"

Kennedy adds that the summer slump could also be attributed to several high-profile absences.

"Pixar was originally scheduled to go in the summer with a film that got moved back, and Fast and Furious was supposed to go but after Paul Walker's accident they moved the movie back and nobody replaced it. One or two movies move and millions disappear."

So how does it work? How do studios and distributors determine a release schedule? Danish Vahidy, Mongrel Media's director of marketing, says studios put "down the tent pole for flagship properties one, two or sometimes three years in advance. With the success of sequels, studios feel more secure planning in advance for franchises rather than an unknown entity."

That means the wannabe blockbusters from this summer — the X-Men, Godzilla and Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles et al — probably had release dates attached to them before Prince William walked Catherine Middleton down the aisle.

Despite some massive openings, this summer saw box-office ticket sales tumble to an eight-year low. ISTOCK

Kennedy says counterprogramming is one of the keys.

"They look at what everybody else does and if they see a Fast and Furious sitting on the second week of July and they have an action movie, they're staying away from that weekend."

Mongrel Media took a risk and counterprogrammed a movie that went on to become one of their biggest hits of the summer. "Boyhood was released in July as the summertime nicely captured the notion of childhood set in the film," Vahidy says.

"It was also a great way to counter program with the Hollywood blockbusters and offer movie goers a smart original film as an option."

The critically acclaimed film was aimed at a different audience than the other two big releases that week, Disney's kid friendly Planes and the raunchy Cameron Diaz comedy Sex Tape.

"That move paid off for us as Boyhood is one of our most successful releases ever with a theatrical box-office of over $2.3 million in Canada and growing."

So why didn't it work for the big releases this summer? Suggested reasons for the downturn range from a lack of family movies, which traditionally pull in big numbers, too many sequels and superhero movies and even divided attention from the World Cup.

Kennedy adds one more reason: "Everybody has busy lives," he says.

"The one thing we've always found is that people always come back. It's not the price of the movie ticket or the popcorn — it's putting aside the time to go. People want to go out and we offer the most affordable out-of-home experience there is."

Want to buy your way to Academy Award glory?

Oscars for sale. The auction of film's most coveted trophies is controversial, but it doesn't stop the deals

'Tis the season when many stars are preparing for months-long campaigns with the distant hope of bringing home an Academy Award come February.

But winning isn't the only way to snag one of the coveted statuettes. Enthusiastic collectors with several hundred thousand to spare can achieve Oscar glory at the right auction house. And they could do it next as soon as this weekend.

The latest prize to go under the hammer is James Cagney's 1942 best actor Oscar for his role in Yankee Doodle Dandy. Auctioneer Nate D. Sanders has required an $800,000 minimum bid for the trophy, which they predict could sell for upward of $1 million by the time the auction closes Thursday night.

"It's the most prestigious Oscar to hit the market in recent years," says Sam Heller, a representative of Nate D. Sanders. For one, he notes, there hasn't been a best actor Oscar available in two decades.

The scarcity of Oscars for purchase isn't an accident. Historically, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has not looked kindly on the free market sale of the prize.

"The academy, its members and the many film artists and craftspeople who've won Academy Awards believe strongly that Oscars should be won, not purchased," the academy said in a statement to The Associated Press. "Unfortunately, despite our objections, we don't have the legal means of stopping the sale of certain statuettes, including this one."

In an effort to combat the sale of awards by winners or their estates, the motion picture academy instituted a rule in 1951 that requires those seeking to sell their Oscars to first offer it to the academy to purchase for $1. That means that any award won before 1951 is, for the most part, fair game.

"It really feeds the fire for collectors. Even on the black market," says Julien's Auctions President and CEO Darren Julien of the legal restrictions. Julien has sold Oscars for auction in the past, but his relationship with the academy is paramount. "We seek their permission before we sell something," he says. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Reality television gets real, goes with scripts

Television. Networks known for unscripted programming make a radical shift to new fare

From left, Elizabeth Hurley as Queen Helena, William Moseley as Prince Liam and Vincent Regan as King Simon in a scene from The Royals. The series premieres in March 2015. PAUL BLUNDELL/E!

Can a zebra change its stripes? Not likely. But these days numerous reality-based networks are sporting new stripes in the form of scripted fare as they move to stretch their brand and freshen their look.

• TruTV last month added several scripted series to the mix, including the sketch-comedy show Friends of the People.

• Animal Planet is in the scripted swim with The Whale: Revenge From the Deep, a drama special premiering Nov. 26 starring Martin Sheen. This isn't the network's first scripted program (maybe you recall Mermaids a few years ago), but now it's poised to go even further with scripted series as well: An adaptation of the popular zombie animal graphic novel The Other Dead is targeted for early 2016.

• Dec. 2 marks the premiere of Girlfriends' Guide to Divorce, Bravo's first original scripted series, with stars including Lisa Edelstein (House) and Paul Adelstein (Private Practice). It will be followed next year by a half-hour comedy Odd Mom Out.

• E! has announced its first scripted drama series, The Royals, exposing "the upstairs and downstairs lives of a fictional royal family set in modern-day London," according to the network. It premieres in March.

• WeTV dipped its toe into scripted series this summer with its legal drama The Divide.

• SundanceTV launched its first drama series, Rectify, last year, with several others airing since.

• History successfully entered scripted television two years ago with The Vikings, then struck more ratings gold with its Hatfields & McCoys and The Bible miniseries.

In summary, one way for a network to secure its turf is by advancing into others'.

That's a logical response to the battle that niche networks now find themselves waging, says Bravo's senior vice-president of development, Lara Spotts, who speaks of "a Hunger Games-ian environment. There are so many choices for viewers that you have to find new ways to deal with your rivals."

Marjorie Kaplan, who as Discovery group president oversees Animal Planet, agrees:

"When you look at the creative landscape and you see the audience's interest in scripted, you can't not ask yourself, 'Is there something we could be doing there?'"

Not only does scripted represent a promised land for boosting audience interest, it's bursting with creativity at a time when reality is "a little bit dull, a little bit stagnant," says truTV's president and programming boss, Chris Linn.

Truth may be stranger than fiction, but capturing truth on camera — and making it look real — is often easier in a fictional form.

"You can really up the ante and up the fun in ways you can't always do with reality," says Jeff Olde, E!'s executive vice-president of programming and development. E! specializes in celebrity and glamour, and its audience demands ever more access to those luminaries — the sort of access that would be off-limits from Britain's real-life royals, but, with actors subbing for them, will be guaranteed in the forthcoming scripted The Royals.

"With scripted," says Olde, "no one says 'No.'"

Television. WE offers viewers 'swag bags' to watch right away

The WE television network is offering prizes to people who watch, as long as they watch promptly.

The network said it is starting an experiment this week where people who prove they watched its Thursday night episode of Tamar & Vince either live or within three days will be eligible to win a bag of show memorabilia and, ultimately, a home entertainment system.

The incentive, believed to be the first in the TV industry, indicates the value of timely viewing. Advertising rates are based on watching programs either live or within three days on digital video recorders or on demand services.

Marc Juris, WE TV president, also wants people to watch live to encourage social media conversations around the network's programming. WE is heavy on reality programming like Kendra on Top and Braxton Family Values. "We wanted to create a level of urgency to watch the shows," Juris said.

The network will flash a code word during a commercial break on Tamar & Vince. Viewers who enter the word on the network's website within three days will be eligible for one of 10 "swag bags" given out each week and for the home theatre grand prize.

If the experiment is deemed successful, it may spread to other programs, he said.

WE is averaging 696,000 live viewers for original prime-time programming this year, an average that increases to 943,000 if viewing within three days is added. Stretch it out for a full week, and another five per cent usually joins in, according to the Nielsen company.

Under Juris, WE — which stood for Women's Entertainment — is trying to broaden its outlook. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Television. Westworld coming to HBO in 2015

J.J. Abrams and Jonathan Nolan's sci-fi drama Westworld, starring Anthony Hopkins, is to air on HBO next year.

HBO made it official via Twitter that the network will broadcast Westworld in 2015. The drama series is a small-screen adaptation of Michael Crichton's 1973 film. Like the movie, the show will depict a futuristic theme park where lifelike robots allow visitors to time-travel virtually.

Anthony Hopkins will play the inventor and head programmer of Westworld. The cast will also include Ed Harris, Evan Rachel Wood, Thandie Newton, James Marsden, Miranda Otto and Jeffrey Wright.

It will be written and directed by Jonathan Nolan, the creator of the J.J. Abrams-produced CBS series Person of Interest and the screenwriter behind the last two movies in his brother Christopher Nolan's Batman trilogy.

The series is the first collaboration between HBO and Abrams. AFP

Sound Check

ALAN CROSS

AC/DC prove age is no obstacle, a cartoon-voice guy revamps All About That Bass, and Play-N-Skillz manage to offend just about everyone

Literally I Can't/ Play-N-Skillz

Forget about this song and video being politically incorrect when it comes to treatment and harassment of women: It's downright offensive to both genders. I can't believe anyone would make something like this today. Behold its NSFW-ish-ness.

Play Ball/ AC/DC

One of the charms of AC/DC is that they're utterly timeless. This song and video could be from anytime between 1980 and today. And at 59, Angus Young can still rock the short pants.

All About That Bass/Mikey Bolts

Sick of Meghan Trainor's ubiquitous hit? What if it were covered by characters from Family Guy and King of the Hill?

See that symbol? It means you can scan this image with your Metro News app to listen to Alan's recommended songs this week.

Name. Assassin's Creed: Unity

For. Xbox One/PS4/PC

Rated. Mature 17+

Having reached the French Revolution, Assassin's Creed has grown into an ungainly catalogue of add-ons, online modes, alternate tasks and frivolous customizations, all competing for your attention through annoying notifications and a map ridiculously overloaded by symbols. It's hard to solve a murder mystery when there's an online player soliciting you from within the crime scene. If you can filter through the noise, you'll find an engaging co-op romance between factions, sly adventures in the Parisian sewers, and some very charismatic fun with instigator and mischief-maker the Marquis de Sade. KRIS ABEL

Johnny Rotten ALL PHOTOS: GETTY IMAGES

Johnny spoils himself Rotten with iPad apps

Former Sex Pistols frontman John Lydon — or, you know, Johnny Rotten — has some serious impulse control issues, which isn't that surprising. What is surprising is that he's been unable to curb a crippling appetite for iPad in-app purchases. No, really. "I wasted — you're the first to know this — 10,000 f–ing pounds in the last two years on apps on my iPad," he tells the Telegraph. (By the way, by current exchange rates 10,000 f–ing pounds translates to about 15,600 f–ing dollars.) "I got into Game of Thrones, Game of War, Real Racing, and I just wanted to up the ante," he says. "And like an idiot I didn't check myself. I've been checked now. But there's a kid in me, see? A bit of my childhood was taken from me and I'm determined to bring it back." At whatever cost, apparently.

Reese riled over rude remarks regarding Renée

Reese Witherspoon has some opinions about the recent attention Renée Zellweger's received — very, very strong opinions, as it turns out. "It's horrible. It's cruel and rude and disrespectful. I can go on and on. It bothers me immensely," she tells the Hollywood Reporter. "Why do they have to tear women down? And why do we have to tear other women down to build another woman up? It drives me crazy. Like, this one looks great without her makeup but that one doesn't look good without her makeup, and it's all just a judgment and assault that I don't — look, men are prey to it as well. I just don't think it's with the same sort of ferocity."

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

Did Chris take sloppy seconds over Sexiest Man Alive title?

NED EHRBAR
Metro in Hollywood

It's Sexiest Man Alive season, which means one of the best Hollywood rumours is getting trotted out again: Ryan Gosling, everyone's favourite Canadian with a Brooklyn accent, reportedly turned down People magazine's offer of the heady title — multiple times.

"They tried a few times, especially during his huge year in 2011," a source tells the Wrap. "The consensus was he's too serious for it, too artsy." I was going to say too bashful, but sure.

People's editorial director, Jess Cagle, for what it's worth, insists that there was no turning down by the Goose for this go round, at least. "While I look forward to the day when Ryan Gosling is named Sexiest Man Alive, this was not his year," Cagle says.

"Our 2014 honoree Chris Hemsworth was our first and only choice. If you want to know why, just look at him. I mean, seriously."

Ariana Grande

Ariana says she's no diva, so what's up with poshest dressing room rider?

Ariana Grande has been making a point of saying she isn't a diva, despite rumours to the contrary. "There's a difference between being determined and being a bitch," she's insisted recently. And while I'm all for a semantics argument about how a diva and a bitch aren't the same thing, some of Grande's past contractual demands are surfacing to undermine her argument. Life & Style has obtained a contract for Grande's time on the Nickelodeon show Victorious that required the show to provide her with a dressing room superior to all other cast members save for series star Victoria Justice. It's kind of tough to claim reports of your diva-ness are exaggerated when you're worried about Leon Thomas III having a nicer place to nap between scenes than you.

Slurp on the rustic side

Soup Week. We wrap up a week of brothy delights with this Chicken and Corn Chowder in Squash

RICARDO COOKS
Chef Ricardo
Ricardo Magazine

A warm, comforting bowl of soup is one of the best things to warm up to on a chilly day and it's also a great way to enjoy the last crop of the season.

This chowder is a beautiful ways to showcase in-season squash.

This recipe serves four. COURTESY RICARDOCUISINE.COM

Ingredients

Bowls (squash halves)
- 2 buttercup squash, about 3 1/2 lb (1.6 kg) each, stem removed
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) olive oil
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) balsamic vinegar
- Salt and pepper
- 8 slices bacon

Chicken and Corn Chowder
- 1 onion, chopped
- 2 stalks celery, thinly sliced
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) butter
- 2 skinless and boneless chicken breast halves, cut into cubes
- 1 clove garlic, finely chopped
- 6 tbsp (90 ml) all-purpose flour
- 4 cups (1 litre) chicken broth
- 1 1/2 cups (375 ml) potatoes, peeled and diced
- 1 cup (250 ml) 35% cream
- 1 cup (250 ml) corn kernels, fresh or frozen
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) chopped parsley

Bowls (squash halves)

1. With the rack in the middle position, preheat the oven to 350 F (180 C).

2. Cut each squash in half horizontally to form four bowls. With a spoon, scrape out the seeds until the inner surface is smooth. If the top of the squash is shallower, scrape off more flesh. With a knife, score the flesh in a crisscross manner every 1 inch (2.5 cm) without piercing the skin.

3. Brush with the oil and vinegar. Season with salt and pepper. Place 2 slices of bacon into each squash half. Place on a baking sheet. Bake for about 1 hour and 30 minutes or until the flesh is tender and the bacon is crispy. Remove the bacon and keep aside.

Chicken and Corn Chowder

1. In a saucepan, brown the onion and celery in the butter. Add the chicken and sauté until golden brown. Add the garlic and cook for 1 minute. Sprinkle with the flour and cook for 1 minute, stirring constantly.

2. Add broth, potatoes and cream. Bring to boil, stirring continuously. Simmer gently 15 minutes or until the potatoes are tender. Add corn and cook 5 minutes. Add the parsley and adjust the seasoning.

3. Ladle the chowder into the squash and garnish with the bacon slices.

I come from the Maritimes, so I know my way around a bowl of chowder.

That said, what I love about Ricardo's chicken and corn interpretation is that there isn't a bowl, or, at least not one you'll need to put in the dishwasher.

Serving this chunky wonder from a half shell of rustic squash is more than inspired, it supports the recipe's initial burst of buttery, corn-forward sweetness and makes it ripe for a white wine match.

I know what you're thinking: Vegetables and wine can be a marriage made in Kardashian-land. Here they're a perfect foil for Chardonnay.

Though much maligned by the current crop of Internet-fed wine aficionados, Chardonnay is a multifaceted grape that gets its oak on in some wines, while putting round creamy fruit in the game in others.

While it may sound corny, J. Lohr Estates' 2012 Riverstone Chardonnay ($18.95 - $23.99) from California balances both the wood and fruit elements, making it a fine partner for this week's dish.

Disney Infinity 2.0 introduces new characters and more role-playing.

A scene from Destiny, which is best when played with others.

A gift fit for a gamer

BLAINE KYLLO
For Metro

Everyone has someone in their life who likes to play video games, and games make for great gifts.

Knowing what to get can be a challenge, though, if you aren't up to speed on the latest FPS or RPG (especially if those acronyms mean nothing to you), so here is a guide to help:

Call of Duty: Advanced Warfare
Platform: PS3, PS4, Windows, X360, Xbox One
The next iteration of the popular first-person shooter takes place in 2054 and features futuristic weapons, ammo, and armour. For ages 17-plus.

Destiny
Platform: PS3, PS4, X360, Xbox One
In this shooter, players become guardians of humanity, travelling to the moon, Venus, and Mars in an attempt to push back the forces of darkness. While the story mode can be played alone, Destiny is at its best when played with others, and your gamers will play for hours. For ages 10-plus.

FIFA 15
Platform: 3DS, PS3, PS4, PS Vita, Wii, Windows, X360, Xbox One
The best sports simulation available is for soccer. FIFA 15 lets footy fans play in quick matches, engage in complete seasons with existing teams or manage their own team of favourite players. The game includes nearly every league, club and team, as well as realistic versions of stadiums from around the world. It's great for all ages.

Skylanders: Trap Team
Platform: 3DS, iOS, PS3, PS4, Wii U, X360, Xbox One
Skylanders is an action-adventure franchise where gamers put real-life action figures into the virtual worlds into which they are playing. This time, villains can be trapped inside collectible crystals to fight for the good side. For ages 10-plus.

Disney Infinity 2.0
Platform: PS3, PS4, Wii U, Windows, X360, Xbox One
The next version of Disney's toy-to-game experience introduces new characters and more role-playing elements to the virtual toy box. Three playsets are available, each with its own unique game: Marvel Super Heroes; Spider-Man; and Guardians of the Galaxy. For ages 10-plus.

Super Smash Bros.
Platform: Wii U
The boisterous fighting game, featuring iconic Nintendo characters such as Mario, Peach, Samus (and 37 others), has seven modes of mayhem to keep players entertained, from stamina matches to custom battles to a party game. Up to eight players can brawl simultaneously and Nintendo's "amiibo" toys can become fighters in the game, too. For ages 10-plus.

The Walking Dead: A Telltale Games Series
Platform: PS3, PS4, Xbox 360, Xbox One
The first two seasons of this dark, complex adventure game are available on next-gen consoles for the first time. A girl struggles to survive a zombie apocalypse. This game is inspired by the comic book, but tells a very different story where players often make choices between bad and worse. For ages 17-plus.

Mario, Peach, and others team up in Super Smash Bros.

Press start: It's gaming season

MIKE YAWNEY
For Metro

The holidays are an exciting time to be a gamer. Not only do all the triple A titles hit stores, so do the limited edition consoles, along with a myriad of unique gaming accessories. Here are a few gift ideas for the ultimate gamer on your list.

Glacier White Playstation 4
$469.99

A striking new look for Sony's popular gaming console. This new version features a glossy white finish, a stark comparison to the original black model. In fact, gamers like the look so much, this unique console sells out as soon as it hits store shelves. Despite its new look, the console has all the same features of the original PS4, and can only be purchased as a bundle with the blockbuster title Destiny.

Xbox One Limited Edition Call of Duty: Advanced Warfare Bundle
$499.99

Microsoft is not only following in Sony's steps by releasing a white Xbox One this holiday season, it has also released a version Call of Duty fans will love. The new Call of Duty Advanced Warfare bundle features a custom designed console, with unique built-in sound effects. It is also the only Xbox One model to feature a 1TB internal hard drive, double the size of the original.

iPod Touch
$219 and up

Once used primarily for music, Apple's iPod Touch has quickly become a popular platform for gaming. This ultra-portable device features a beautiful four-inch retina display, snappy processor, and more than 250,000 game titles from which to choose. On top of this, the built-in dual cameras give this device many uses.

Playstation TV
$99.99

A tiny device with a lot of potential. Playstation TV, about the size of a smartphone, lets you watch movies, TV shows, and play original Playstation, Playstation 2 and Playstation 3 games on your TV, even if you don't own the consoles. A small cartridge slot lets PS Vita owners play the handheld games on the big screen, plus PS4 owners can stream games to a second television, meaning you'll never have to move your PS4 console around the house again. Important to note, not all Playstation titles work with Playstation TV at this time.

Nintendo 3DS XL
$199.99

While this popular handheld has been around for more than two years, Nintendo has decided to freshen it up with a stylish new look. Three new models will be on Canadian store shelves this holiday season, themed after Super Smash Bros, Persona Q, and the classic Nintendo Entertainment System. The look may be new but the hardware remains the same.

Hyperkin RetroN 5
$149.95

A console that lets you play classic games from the past. The RetroN 5 features cartridge slots that will work with Gameboy, Gameboy Colour, Gameboy Advance, Famicom, Super Famicom, Nintendo, Super Nintendo, Sega Genesis and Megadrive games. The console enhances the resolution of these classic titles and supports the ability to save your game at any point. Important to note: You need the original cartridges to play games.

Clockwise from bottom left, iPod Touch, $219 and up; Playstation TV $99.99; Nintendo 3DS XL, $199.99; Xbox One Limited Edition Call of Duty: Advanced Warfare Bundle $499.99; Hyperkin RetroN 5, $149.95 and Glacier White Playstation 4, $469.99

Eskimos zero in on Cornish

West semifinal.
Canadian rusher under microscope with berth in Grey Cup Game on the line this Sunday

The Eskimos will have to try to contain well-rested top rusher Jon Cornish during this Sunday's West Divison Final at McMahon Stadium in Calgary. BRENT JUST/GETTY IMAGES

Stop Jon Cornish.

That will be both a primary focus of the Edmonton Eskimos on Sunday and also their biggest challenge in their attempt to beat the Calgary Stampeders in the CFL West final and earn a berth in the Grey Cup.

The Stampeders running back led the league in rushing with 1,082 yards while playing just nine games. Two of those games were against the Eskimos and he ran for 272 yards in back-to-back Calgary victories in September.

"We want to stop him because their offence does evolve around him most of the time," Edmonton's six-foot-six, 234-pound defensive end Willie Jefferson said after the team's closed practice Thursday.

"We have to slow him down, make them try to find another way to win the game without him."

But, he admitted, a "lot of things are easier said than done" and the Eskimos defence has to do a better job of tackling Cornish then they did in the previous two games.

Edmonton head coach Chris Jones — a former Calgary assistant — said stopping Cornish begins with his players staying in their proper gaps and lending support.

"He gets his pads turned north and south and we have to make sure, once he gets turned north and south you have to get a hand on him and get some help," Jones said. "He's a big back; he's going to break tackles so we have to do a great job of getting a lot of people there."

The Eskimos lost all three games to Calgary this season. In their back-to-back Labour Day losses Edmonton was without quarterback Mike Reilly and, as of Thursday, Jones wasn't prepared to declare him the starter.

Reilly missed the final regular-season game with a foot injury and came on in the second half of Edmonton's 18-10 semifinal win over Saskatchewan last weekend.

Jones said he "looked awfully good today."

Linebacker Dexter McCoil, the West's outstanding rookie, missed Thursday's practice to attend to a family matter but Jones said he was expected back in time for Friday's practice.

While Cornish is a focus of the Edmonton defence, the Eskimos are confident their running back, John White, will match Cornish on Sunday.

"Best running back in the league," said Jefferson. "Quick feet, likes to be aggressive, when our offence is on the field all eyes are on him."

White, who also played only nine games, finished third in rushing with 852 yards but was second to Cornish (7.8 yards) in yards per rush at 6.9. Edmonton finished second to Calgary in rushing yards per game (143.9 to 129.4) but ahead of them in total offence per game (382.6 yards to 378.9).

"He's a tremendous blocker, both in the pocket and outside the pocket," Jones said of White who ran for 134 yards against the Roughriders. "He's very hard to tackle, he's elusive, he breaks a lot of tackles and he's a lot stronger than you think he is."

Fine update

The CFL fined Edmonton Eskimos QB Mike Reilly and Montreal Alouettes linebacker Kyries Hebert and defensive tackle Alan-Michael Cashn on Thursday.

- Reilly was fined for not talking to media after the Esks' practice last Saturday.
- Hebert was fined for leading with his helmet on a tackle in last Sunday's East semifinal, while Cash was punished for a late and hit against the Lions.

West Final pick

Eskimos at Stampeders, Sunday, 2:30 p.m.

Jon Cornish will be a focal point on Sunday, but Calgary also beat Edmonton 26-22 at Commonweath Stadium on July 24 without last year's CFL outstanding player.

The Stampeders were 3-0 against their provincial rivals and accounted for half of the Eskimos' regular-season losses while posting a CFL-best 15-3 record.

Edmonton also runs the ball well, finishing second behind Calgary (136.6 yards per game). Running back John White (852 yards) was second overall behind Cornish.

Rarely this season have the Stampeders beat themselves. They've recorded a league-low 29 turnovers and are the CFL's least penalized team. By comparison, Edmonton had 41 turnovers (fourth-most) and led the CFL in penalty yards.

But since winning the '08 Grey Cup, the Stampeders have a 3-4 playoff record.

And it's also difficult to fathom Calgary beating Edmonton a fourth time this year but the Stampeders a) have a rested Cornish b) are coming off the bye c) are home d) play disciplined football and e) have a shot at playoff redemption.

Pick — Calgary.

Maciocia's Carabins near Vanier Cup

Carabins coach Danny Maciocia, left, hugs Laval Rouge et Or coach Glen Constantin last Saturday in Quebec City. JACQUES BOISSINOT/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Happy where he is.
Former CFL coach has no plans to return to the league he was fired from Danny Maciocia is in no hurry to get back into coaching in the Canadian Football League.

The 47-year-old who took the Edmonton Eskimos to a Grey Cup in 2005 is quite content with his current job as head coach of the University of Montreal Carabins.

His team ended the mighty Laval Rouge et Or's 11-year reign as Quebec conference champions and a two-year run of national titles in Canadian Interuniversity Sport football with a 12-9 overtime victory in Quebec City last weekend.

Now the Carabins are two wins away from a first Vanier Cup title. It starts Saturday when they play host to the Manitoba Bisons in the Uteck Bowl, with the winner advancing to the Vanier Cup game Nov. 29 at Percival Molson Stadium.

"I've had certain opportunities (to coach in the CFL) the last couple of years," Maciocia said Thursday. "I kept them hush-hush because I didn't want it out there. It could have affected recruiting here.

"But I'm happy here. Honestly, I have one of the best jobs in Canada. I get to do it in my own backyard, at an institution with a strong reputation for academics and that is very encouraging and supportive of their sports teams. You never want to say never, but you'd have think about it real well before you pack up and get back into that rat race because this is a pretty unique job."

The Montreal native's CFL career started as a volunteer coach with the Montreal Alouettes in 1996. He later became offensive co-ordinator and, in 2002, moved to the same job in Edmonton, where he won a Grey Cup in 2003 under coach Tom Higgins.

He replaced Higgins as head coach in 2005 and won a cup, but then things went south. He was named general manager even though the Eskimos missed the playoffs in 2006 and kept that job until, after years of intense criticism from fans and media, he was fired in July of 2010.

Asked to sum up his years in Edmonton, Maciocia said: "I enjoyed it. I was there for eight years, we went to three Grey Cup games, won two. I wouldn't exchange any of it."

Benevides fired from B.C. Lions

After watching the B.C. Lions stumble to an embarrassing finish in the 2014 CFL season, general manager Wally Buono said changes would be coming.

He made good on that statement Thursday, as head coach Mike Benevides was fired after three years with the club.

The move was not considered a shock, as the Lions had a nightmare end to the season, with a humiliating 50-17 loss to Montreal in the East Division semifinal serving as the last straw.

"Was I in a state of shock (Sunday)? Yes," said Buono said Monday at a post-season availability with reporters. "Would I ever would have imagined that would have occurred? No.

"What did I learn about our football club? I learned the fact that we're not good enough and I learned the fact we have to do something about it."

When asked if Benevides would be back in 2015, Buono responded with: "Are any of us going to be back?"

NFL. Players' union appeals suspension of Vikings star Peterson

The NFL players' union has appealed the league's suspension of Adrian Peterson.

In a letter to its player representatives and executive committee obtained by The Associated Press on Thursday, the NFLPA calls commissioner Roger Goodell's punishment "unprecedented, arbitrary, and unlawful" and demands an independent, neutral arbitrator hears Peterson's case.

On Tuesday, Goodell suspended Peterson without pay for the rest of the season and told him he will not be considered for reinstatement before April 15 for his violation of the NFL personal conduct policy.

Peterson pleaded no contest Nov. 4 to misdemeanour reckless assault in Texas for injuries to his four-year-old son with a wooden switch.

The union says Peterson was told the games he missed on a special exempt list would count as time served toward a suspension. The 2012 NFL MVP played just one game for the Minnesota Vikings this season. Peterson has said he intended no harm to his son and that he only wanted to discipline him.

MLB. With $82M deal, catcher all smiles sitting next to Anthopoulos in Toronto introduction

Blue Jays general manager Alex Anthopoulos has traded franchise icons, pulled off blockbuster deals and signed players to lucrative extensions.

Landing a top-flight free agent by offering more term and dollars than other teams was new territory. But Anthopoulos was determined to sign Canadian catcher Russell Martin, and this week he got it done.

"I felt we wanted him more than anybody else.

"That's not to take anything away, but we just put so much time into this.

"And like I said, he's the key to our off-season and he's someone that we really wanted to have."

Other teams were also considering four-year packages for the 31-year-old backstop but the addition of a fifth year helped put the Blue Jays over the top. The $82-million US deal is back-loaded to give the team financial flexibility in the short-term.

"Alex was pretty convinced that I was going to be a Blue Jay and he was convinced early on too," Martin said. "It's always nice to know that somebody really wants you, it makes you feel rewarded for what you've done."

Bernier bounces back, Leafs beat Lightning 5-2

James van Riemsdyk had a pair of goals to lead the Toronto Maple Leafs to a much-needed 5-2 victory over the Tampa Bay Lightning on Thursday.

David Clarkson, Richard Panik and Roman Polak also pitched in as Toronto (10-8-2) scored early in the first and added three more in the second to snap a three-game losing streak in in front of 19,089 fans at Air Canada Centre.

The normally high-scoring Lightning couldn't break through Leafs goalie Jonathan Bernier, who redeemed himself after being pulled from Tuesday night's 9-2 loss to Nashville after giving up three goals on 12 shots over 20 minutes. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Lehner leads Senators over Predators

Robin Lehner made 33 saves to lead the Ottawa Senators to a 3-2 victory over the Nashville Predators Thursday night.

Bobby Ryan, Alex Chiasson and Jared Cowen scored for the Senators (9-5-4).

The Predators (12-5-2) got goals from Shea Weber and Olli Jokinen, while Carter Hutton — playing just his third game of the season — faced 19 shots.

Trailing 3-1, Jokinen made it a one-goal game in the opening minutes of the third as he knocked in a Derek Roy rebound. It was Jokinen's first point with the Predators.

NFL moves Bills-Jets from Buffalo

Snowed out in Buffalo, the Bills are heading to Detroit to play their "home" game against the New York Jets on Monday night.

The NFL announced the location and date of the game on Thursday night after a severe lake-effect storm paralyzed much of the Buffalo region. More than 150 centimetres of snow have fallen in the Buffalo area since Monday, and another 30 to 90 centimetres were projected to fall by Friday.

The storm forced the Bills to cancel their past two days of practice because of impassable roads and driving bans in Orchard Park and many communities neighbouring Ralph Wilson Stadium. The team intends to travel to Detroit on Friday and practice at the Lions' facility.

The Lions are at New England on Sunday.

"We greatly appreciate the hospitality of the Detroit Lions in hosting the Bills and this game," NFL spokesman Michael Signora said.

'Wrong path.' Parents led Blue Jackets' Johnson to bankruptcy

Columbus Blue Jackets defenceman Jack Johnson has filed for bankruptcy while earning millions under a $30.5-million contract in his ninth NHL season.

In federal court records, the 27-year-old said his finances have fallen apart under his parents' management. He said creditors and his financial advisers took advantage of him through fraudulent transactions and predatory lending, pledging his contract earnings as security for unconventional loans that he didn't authorize and that had exorbitant interest rates.

Johnson filed for bankruptcy Oct. 7, two days before the team began the regular season. Those filings indicated he owed more than $12 million. For estimated assets, he checked the box indicating $1 million to $10 million.

Johnson, who was traded to the Blue Jackets by the Los Angeles Kings in 2012, told The Columbus Dispatch he was led astray by others.

"I'd say I picked the wrong people who led me down the wrong path. I've got people in place who are going to fix everything now. It's something I should have done a long time ago," said Johnson, who declined to comment further to the newspaper.

As a busy young athlete unexperienced in money management, the Indianapolis native wanted to make his earnings last beyond his professional career, and he entrusted his financial affairs to his parents, according to court documents.

The filings blamed his situation on unethical actions by financial advisers and creditors "in a systematic, deliberate and predatory lending and investment scheme whereby they lined their own pockets" at his expense.
